

Faith Scenarios

Choices, Choices Everywhere

Jessica had been hearing about Healing School for years. As a dedicated Christian, she wanted to learn all she could about Jesus and the Word of God so that she could grow in her Christian faith ever closer to Father God through Jesus His Son.

She prayed about attending Healing School, which was a big commitment: 3 semesters of teaching covering a year and a half. After years of serious prayer, she got a release from the Holy Spirit and a confirmation that she was to attend and complete all 3 semesters of Healing School.

Jessica successfully attended all of semesters 1 and 2, becoming more excited by each class and looking forward to Semester 3, which focused on cleansing. She had seen cleansing at her church but not to the depth of this class: she couldn't rave enough about this Healing School, repeatedly telling people how much these classes had changed her life.

Jessica completed days 1 through 4 of Semester 3, excitedly anticipating her own personal cleansing and graduation on Day 5. However, in her own church an all-day seminar of great interest to her was scheduled on the same day and at the same time as this final day of Healing School.

What should Jessica have done?

a) After much prayer, Jessica decided that God wanted her to attend the seminar at her church.	d) She decided to follow through on her commitment to complete Healing School.
b) Jessica fasted and prayed, asking God which class she should attend.	e) Jessica decided to attend the seminar at her church, with the hope that she could make up the Healing School class and still graduate.
c) Because of her great interest in this seminar which was repeated infrequently at her church, she remembered that she had promised herself that, the next time available to her, she would attend the class.	f) Jessica decided to attend the seminar at her church, knowing that she could repeat Semester 3 of the Healing School when it was offered again the next semester and graduate at that time.

Faith Scenarios

Shower Power

Millie had completed Semesters 1 and 2 of a 3-semester, year-and-a-half-long Healing School. She was now entering the final semester of Healing School, attending class #1 and learning so much that she was excitedly looking forward to the next 4 sessions. Suddenly she realized that she had a conflict of schedule for the last class!

If she missed the school, she wouldn't graduate and then she would have to repeat the whole semester.

What was worse was that the conflict was of her own making: she was in charge of the bridal party for her daughter-in-law to be, had already scheduled it some months earlier, had reserved the restaurant, and had sent out the invitations.

How should Millie handle this conflict of schedule?

a) Should she go ahead with the Bridal Shower and miss Healing School?	d) Should she go ahead with the Bridal Shower, missing Healing School but hoping that the Dean of the School would make an exception for her?
b) Should she put someone else in charge of the Bridal Shower and choose to miss the shower so she can go to Healing School?	e) Should she move forward with the Bridal Shower, hoping that she would be given permission to make up the missed class of Healing School with CDs and completed homework?
d) Should she change the date for the Bridal Shower, notifying everyone of the change, so she would be free to attend both the shower and Healing School?	f) Should she attend Healing School and then leave early to attend the Bridal Shower, keeping in mind that the earlier she leaves Healing School is the longer time that she has at the Shower?